FAA Safety Briefing LIVE! - November/December 2021 Issue

The NovDec 2021 issue focused on the FAA's efforts to inspire young women, and youth from diverse backgrounds, to pursue aerospace careers and create a consistent pipeline of professionals for a robust workforce of the future. We looked at the important role science, technology, engineering, arts, and math (STEAM) education plays in this endeavor, and how FAA partnerships with industry, academia, non-profits, and government agencies help to develop STEM/STEAM outreach and educational programs. We also explored some of the many aerospace career options available and ways you can help introduce others to this exciting and growing industry.

Feature articles included: When I Grow Up, I Want to be an Aviator! – How FAA Helps Launch Aviation Careers Beyond the Flight Deck – Non-Flying Work in the Aviation World Picking Up Steam – How FAA-Industry Collaboration Keeps Training Real Meet Shaesta Waiz – Trailblazer, Mentor, and Global Inspiration for Women in Aviation Small Pros for Big Change – Dive into Drone Jobs

Regular departments included: Jumpseat discussed pipelines, pathways, and partnerships that support aviation careers. Condition Inspection explained what to expect from and FAA medical
